

Wilhelm to Wear Scarlet Uniform at His Wedding

Simplifies Details Because of Criticism: Ex-Queen Sophie to Attend.

DOORN, Holland, Nov. 3 (Associated Press).—Painfully impressed with the marked disapproval shown by friends of the late Empress Augusta and by monarchist circles in Germany generally of his coming marriage, Emperor Wilhelm has decided to eliminate certain features of the wedding festivities on Sunday.

One of the plans abandoned by the ex-Kaiser is that of engaging an orchestra to play the wedding music. He has decided to content himself with strains from the family organ. The musical program includes Mendelssohn's Wedding March and the Bridal Chorus from "Lohengrin."

William will wear the scarlet uniform of a guards' regiment, and his bride's bouquet, which will be from the castle hothouses, will be of mauve orchids and white carnations to match her gown of mauve.

Prince Henry of Prussia, brother of Wilhelm, arrived to-night for the wedding.

The Kaiser's sister, the former Queen Sophie of Greece, will be one of the fifty or sixty guests who will attend the religious ceremony in the main hall of Doorn House. Following the ceremony the wedding breakfast, prepared by a staff of German cooks, will be served at one long table decorated with maiden-hair ferns and red roses.

No guests will be allowed at the civil ceremony in the lodge at the entrance to Doorn House, with the exception of Count von Moltke, marshal of the ex-Kaiser's court, and the official witnesses.

The guests will await the return of the bridal couple from the lodge in the main hall of the castle, where Dr. Vogel, former court chaplain, will perform the religious ceremony. Directly after this, it is reported, Herminie will ceremoniously receive the title "Queen of Prussia."

The apartment on the ground floor of Doorn House where the ex-Kaiser resided has not been opened, and Herminie's apartment is on the second floor, separated by a small boudoir from the ex-Kaiser's room.

Numerous alterations and renovations have been made in Doorn House by selected German workmen to avoid gossip through local artisans.

Doorn House is best described as a spacious country house of eighteenth century type. It is a three storied brick structure flanked by two square towers, about 300 yards south of the highway between Utrecht and Arnhem, amid beautiful surroundings. The estate does not differ much from those of many wealthy Dutch families except for the elaborate arrangement of foliage by which it is hidden from view.

Alterations in House. The front of the house; that is, the side facing the highway, is now the rear, and only top stories are visible from the road, the lower part of the building being hidden by evergreens.

The approach to the house is a gravelled forecourt leading to a semi-circular building, which is called a lodge, but which is almost too large and massive to warrant this appellation. This is the outer bulwark of the estate and serves as barracks for the army of retainers and Dutch rural police.

The main hall, where the religious ceremony will take place, has been enlarged by the removal of the partition walls of two adjoining rooms. An altar and lectern have been moved into the hall from the chapel, which is now used, which stands a little distance from the house. Plants and flowers have been placed in the hall, making a pleasing contrast against the floors and walls of white Italian marble.

The majority of the German guests belonging to the Kaiser's immediate family circle are not expected to arrive until Saturday and will leave on Sunday, the former Crown Prince alone excepted, who will remain at Doorn.

There will be six witnesses at the civil marriage, as follows: Count Van Lynde van Sandenburg, Grand Chamberlain of the Dutch court; Count de Goy, Governor of Utrecht; J. P. Kan, Governmental General Secretary; Count Charles Adenburgh Bentinck of Zutphen; Count C. L. van der Grinten, Governor General, now living at Arnhem; Jonkheer Van den Bosch, Mayor of Amsterdam, and the German captain, Sigfried von Hesse, who is Herminie's adjutant, who married Countess Elizabeth Bentinck and who now resides at Arnhem.

All the witnesses must be residents of Holland, according to the Dutch law. The Mayor of Doorn will conduct the proceedings, assisted by the communal secretary. The civil marriage will be celebrated at the town hall, by a certain marriage contract, drawn up by Notary Scheut.

History of Romance. Although Princess Herminie von Schoenbach-Carolath von Reuss comes from an old and aristocratic family, dating back more than 500 years, she had never before attracted international or even national attention. Her sudden rise to the title of Queen of Prussia, empty of all titles, is due to her inclusion in a letter written by one of her sons to Doorn offering condolence to the death of the former Empress.

The ex-Kaiser answered the letter himself, but addressed it to the Princess instead of the boy. Thus began a correspondence between the aged widower and the young widow of 25 years of age.

Some months later the Princess and her children were invited to visit Doorn. It is said that the ex-Kaiser returned by the Maurelania, which the Princess arrived and was accepted.

Tall and of regal bearing, the Princess Herminie at one time was one of the best-dressed beauties in Germany. She was first engaged to her brother-in-law, Grand Duke William Ernst of Saxe-Weimar, after the death of his wife, Princess Carolina. Prince Carolina had married the Grand Duke but their domestic life was not a happy one. Princess Herminie, then 15, died the role of peacekeeper, and succeeded to her position when Prince Carolina died soon after the reconciliation. The Grand Duke then asked Herminie to be his wife. She consented on condition he get rid of a certain maid whom she disliked, but the Grand Duke considered this too much of a sacrifice and the match fell through.

Two years later she married Prince von Schoenbach-Carolath, an officer of the Uhlan Guards, who died a few days later, leaving her five children, the eldest of whom is now 15.

Five Americans, an Indian and a Chinese Among Hoppe's 32 Most Beautiful Women in the World

Mrs. Lydig Hoyt and Marion Davies in 'Book of Fair Women.'

Thirty-two women have been selected from all femininity by J. O. Hoppe, the English photographer, as leading beauties of the world. Five of them are Americans or were so born. Four of them are English, and for the rest of the women Mr. Hoppe draws upon twenty-three countries and races.

The photographer explains that this compilation of pulchritude, which he calls "The Book of Fair Women," represents twenty years of photography.

Of course, with all the women there are in the world and all the influence they can bring to bear, there is bound to be much controversy. But Mr. Hoppe has made his selections and the publishers say that he stands by them. A list of the women was issued yesterday by the American publisher, Alfred A. Knopf.

The American women are Mrs. Lydig Hoyt, Viscountess Maidstone, Malvina Longfellow and Marion Davies. The English beauties are Hester, Lady Diana Duff-Cooper, Gladys Cooper and Kathleen Martin. Most of these women are well known.

For example, everybody who follows the fortunes of the stage knows that Mrs. Lydig Hoyt stepped out of the inner circles of metropolitan society to become a screen actress and later to play the leading roles in the most successful of the American picture industry.

Viscountess Maidstone was Margaret Drexel, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel of Philadelphia. She married Viscount Maidstone in 1910. As in the case of Lady Lavery, she has repeatedly been selected as one of the really beautiful women in England. Malvina Longfellow started her career as a professional beauty in the ateliers of New York when she was known by her real name, Malvina Langfelder. She appeared in various musical comedies in America, migrated to London, where she created a furor by her extraordinary charm of face and figure, and where she was married to Albert Carter of Mayfair; Marion Davies was well known as a motion picture actress.

Of the English women, Hester is one of Great Britain's celebrated stage beauties. Lady Diana Duff-Cooper is the daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Rutland. Like Mrs. Hoyt, she stepped from society into the movies. Gladys Cooper, a British actress, is the wife of Sir Philip Jones, the artist.

"She is the most perfect type of pure, golden hair Anglo-Saxon loveliness that can be conceived. No one can be more beautiful than that."

Kathleen Martin, a British actress, is the wife of Sir Philip Jones, the artist.

From fame and obscurity come Mr. Hoppe's other selections. Mrs. Wellington Koo, the Chinese Minister to Great Britain, is quite well known to Americans, in as much as her husband was formerly Minister to Washington. During the Arms Limitation Conference it was said that she was the best dressed woman in the American capital.

Representing the beauty of the Indian woman is Princess White Deer, great granddaughter of Chief Running Water, who was killed at the Battle of Little Bighorn.

BOURNE ART SALE REACHES $42,500 TOTAL. Rembrandt Peale's Washington Brings $2,900.

At Silo's Galleries, 40 East Forty-fifth street, the sale which began on Wednesday of the furnishings, paintings, furs and jewelry of the estate of the late Frederick G. Bourne, president of the Singer Sewing Machine Company, and Commodore of the New York Yacht Club, continued yesterday. It will close with sessions to-day and Monday. There will also be a private sale of important eighteenth century tapestries, there this afternoon.

Yesterday the crowd was so large that many were turned away. For the first time the total is $42,500. The top price yesterday was brought by Rembrandt Peale's "Portrait of Washington," sold for $2,900 by J. H. Purdy.

Other interesting items in the collection of paintings were a Van Marcke landscape with cattle, sold to R. E. Knapp, for $2,000; "Ideal Head," by J. J. Henner, also bought by Mr. Purdy for $2,000; "Portrait of a River," sold for $900 to Joseph Bider; and Bourgeois's "Mother and Child," sold to I. T. Tower for the same price.

Two paintings by the American artist, Horatio Walker, "Sheep in Pasture" and "The Woodchoppers," were bought by Howard Young for $600 and $1,200, respectively; and "Cows at Watering Trough," by the American, Carlton Wiggins, was bought by Dr. Stimson for $750. The paintings brought $15,000. The sale is by order of the executors to settle the estate.
